A School of Solid Glass
Gossips Are Criminals

Marco Polo in Dollars

NEWS more important than bootlegging or oil reserve stealing is this: Berlin will build a great public school made almost entirely of glass. Held up by a frame of steel and concrete, the school walls will be thick plate glass, admitting sunlight everywhere.

Later may come schools of the new quartz glass that admits health-giving ultraviolet rays.

THE ages of stone, bronze and iron may be followed by the age of glass, which will mark man's final exit from the damp, dark cave to all-day sunlight. Houses of glass that stones will not break and highways of glass, one above the other, in great cities, will be interesting steps in man's progress.

BERLIN'S public school of plate glass, to make the day, beautiful for teachers and children, will be set in a beautiful park, after the fashion of California, where the most beautiful buildings are great public schools, each in its park grounds.

Our richest city, by the way, allows children to study in dark, old school buildings, some of them fire traps. It is not that New York City could not afford public schools finer than those of California or Berlin. The people of New York intrust their public schools to those that apparently do consider our public school system either not important or not desirable.

GERMANY'S new penal code, as important as the Berlin public school of plate glass, plans to protect society from criminals instead of merely punishing crime in a hard and fast way, as though for revenge.

And, most gratifying, gossips will be included among the criminal classes. Gossip, in the world's long history, has done more real harm than murder. Gossip breaks hearts, condemns them to endless suffering. That is worse than killing.

THE city of Syracuse spends on an average 17 cents out of every dollar of income—and old fashioned finance, wagging its head, says "extravagance." Buying new automobiles takes 10 cents and a quarter, gasoline three and a half cents, accessories three cents. And that's the best investment of 17 cents on the dollar that Syracuse could make.

IF a hotpot could buy wings for 17 cents on his dollar and fly, instead of painfully hopping in the dust, he'd be a fool not to spend the 17 cents. Automobiles are flying. Get a car if you have not got one, or a better car, if you can afford it.

THE NEW YORK TIMES dwells on the financial achievements of A. P. Giannini, head of the Bank of Italy and allied corporations, with five hundred millions in capital and shares with a market value exceeding a billion dollars.

Mr. Giannini, says the Times, gained his prestige in California in the San Francisco fire. While the fire was burning, he hauled the cash from the vaults of his burning bank down the caissons, where he buried it in his garden. Then he returned to San Francisco, with the fire still smoldering, bringing his cash back with him, put out a Bank of Italy sign on his brother's house and began lending money to clients apparently ruined by the fire. He knew that a mere fire cannot destroy the responsibility of a real man.

THE TIMES, comparing Giannini in finance with the great Venetian, Marco Polo, in exploration, says eastern financiers returning from California tell with amazement of Giannini's achievements. His purchases of more than 100 banks in California, and of giant banks in New York City, and of giant investments, totaling hundreds of millions, in Standard Oil, National City Bank, New York Central, Pennsylvania Railroad, and especially United States government bonds.

THE TIMES seems surprised that all this should be done by "the son of an Italian immigrant born in California's Santa Clara Valley."

The Times might remember that our first immigrant, Columbus, was also Italian, and it might help to fight the foolish immigration law that now keeps out such men as Giannini's father.

Two million more good Italian workers in California and two other million in Florida would add billions to the wealth of those states.

Mellon Holds Tax Cut to $227,000,000

REVEALS PLAN TODAY BEFORE COMMITTEE

Secretary of Treasury Outlines Program of Coolidge Administration

WOULD AID CORPORATIONS

If Schedule Goes Through Two Billions Will Have Been Cut Off Tax Bill

Washington, Oct. 31—Secretary of the Treasury Mellon proposed a tax cut of not to exceed $227,000,000 when he appeared before the house ways and means committee to present the administration's views on the 1928 revenue act.

The new "Mellon plan" is:

(1) Reduction of 1 1/2 percent in the 13 1/2 percent corporation tax, with estimated revenue loss of $135,000,000 annually.

(2) Partnership basis of taxation for corporations of under $25,000 income and with 10 or less stockholders, with probable $35,000,000 revenue loss.

(3) Readjustment of surtax rates, especially benefiting taxpayers with incomes ranging from $18,000 to $70,000. This means a $50,000,000 revenue loss.

(4) Repeal of the federal estate tax.

(5) Tax exemption of income derived from American bankers acquired by foreign central banks of issue.

Opposes Tobacco Repeal
Mellon opposed repeal of the tobacco tax, which last year netted the government $370,170,000; the three per cent passenger automobile tax, yielding $68,000,000 in 1927, and the 10 per cent admissions tax on amusement tickets costing over 75 cents.

He favored retention of the normal tax of one and one-half, three and five per cent on incomes up to $10,000; exemption of minimum surtax of one per cent on incomes from $10,000 to $14,000; and the maximum surtax of 20 per cent on incomes of over $100,000.

Under the 1926 law on incomes from $14,000 to $24,000 the rate increases one per cent for every additional $2,000 of income and in the $24,000-$34,000 bracket the grading is by steps of $4,000.

10 Per Cent at $40,000
"By adjusting the rate so that it will rise uniformly, increasing one per cent for each additional $4,000 on incomes from $10,000 to $70,000, some reductions will be granted to all taxpayers but more particularly those whose income is below $40,000."

PROTESTS HUBBY'S SHOOTING; VICTIM

SIGNATURE OF SINCLAIR ON PAPER SHOWN

Contract Between Continental Trading Co. and Late A. E. Humphreys

Washington, Oct. 31—The signature of Harry F. Sinclair on an oil contract that produced profits, part of which found their way into the hands of former Secretary of Interior Albert B. Fall, was shown to the oil conspiracy trial jury today.

The government is contending the money Fall got was a bribe from Sinclair for the purpose of securing a lease on the Teapot Dome Oil Reserve.

The contract in question was between the Continental Trading Co. of Canada and the late Col. A. E. Humphreys of Texas, providing for the purchase by the Continental of 33,000 barrels of oil at $1.50 per barrel.

Sinclair's name appeared on the contract as a guarantor in behalf of the Continental.

Identifies Contract
The government is contending that Sinclair was the moving spirit of the Continental, for the contract was organized only for the Humphreys deal and has never since functioned.

Former Senator Charles S. Thomas of Colorado, attorney for Humphreys, identified the contract. He explained that Sinclair was present when it was drafted and that he had insisted on Sinclair's signature because he had never heard of the Continental Trading Co. and didn't want to sign a $30,000,000 contract with an unknown concern.

Cross-examining Thomas, Martin W. Littleton, Sinclair's attorney, sought to show that H. M. Blackmer, formerly with the Midwest Refining Co., was the dominant figure in the Continental. Blackmer is in Paris and had refused to obey a subpoena to appear in this trial.

Presents Contract
Littleton undertook to convince the jury that Sinclair was present as an agent for his own crude oil purchasing company, desirous of purchasing the continental oil from the Continental.

H. L. Phillips, president of the Sinclair Crude Oil Purchasing Co., took the stand and produced a contract under which that concern bought the oil from the Continental at $1.75 per barrel.

This was a profit to the Continental of 25 cents a barrel—$8,000,000 in all. Sinclair had guaranteed the Continental contract which made possible the taking of this profit from his own company.

NEW TRIAL MOTION FILED IN HAND CASE
Case of Harry Zillick May Not Be Heard Until Next Court Term

Haverly, Oct. 31—Motion for arrest of judgment and for a new trial in the case of Wilbur Hand, convicted here last week of robbery in connection with the holdup of the Commercial Savings Bank of Gallon, was filed by defense attorneys here today in common pleas court.

Attorneys for Harry Zillick also filed a motion to quash the indictment, alleging it contained technical defects. It was said today that the Zillick case may not be held until the next term of court.

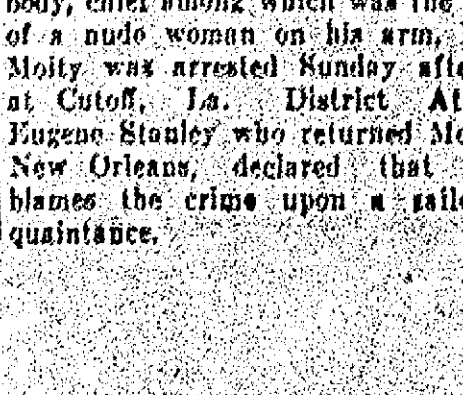

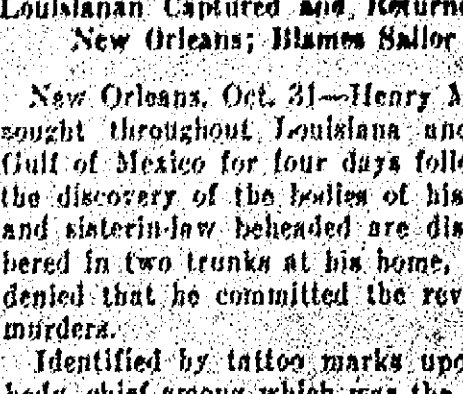

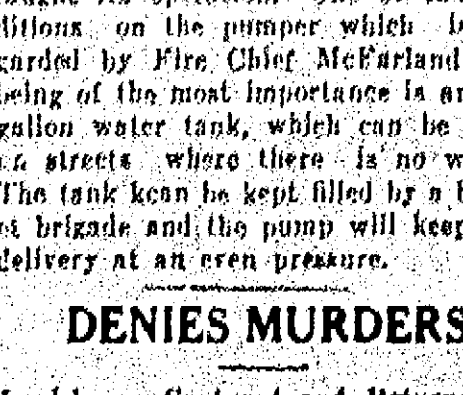

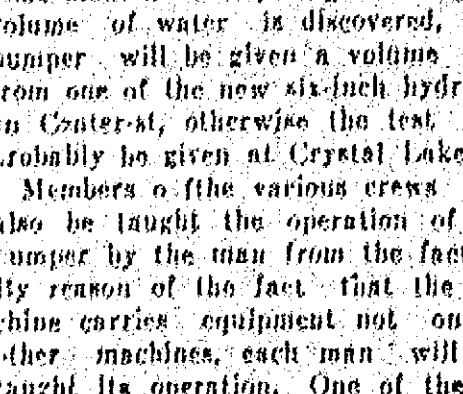

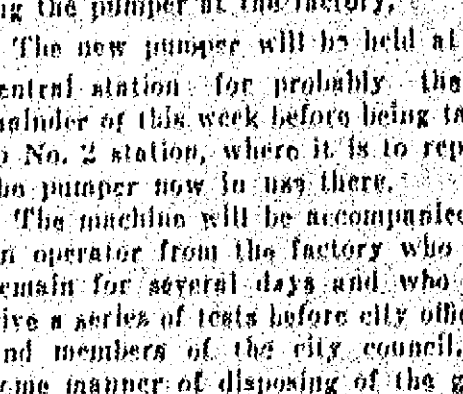

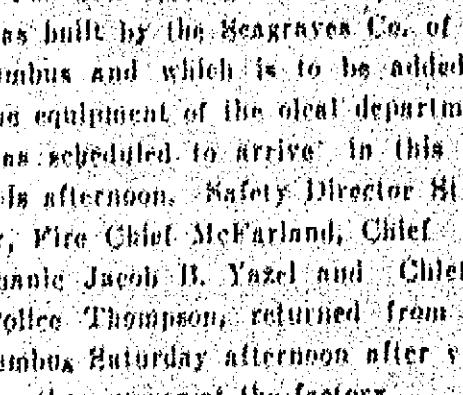

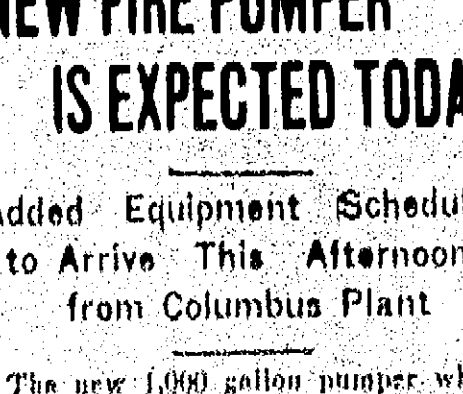

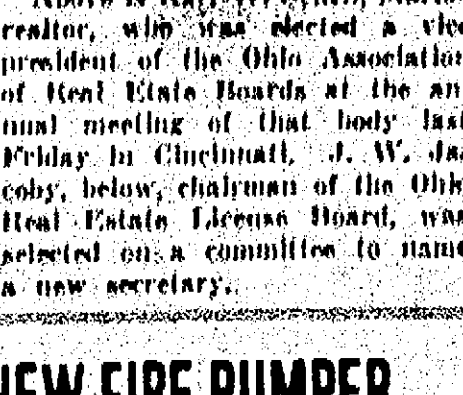

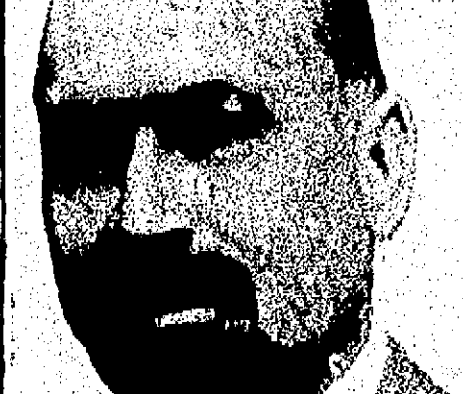

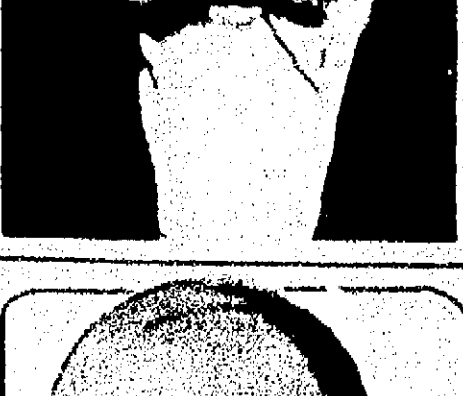

Zillick's lawyers also announced they would request the court to order new witnesses to be called in the proceedings at Zillick's trial. If he is placed on trial, until after the trial is over, Arthur J. Hand, brother of Wilbur Hand, who was arrested on a robbery charge in the bank holdup at the completion of his brother's trial, which he attended, remained in jail today, unable to furnish $25,000 bond.

Hand has not funds to hire an attorney. Hand was arrested after claiming to have recognized him as one of the band of six handlars who last June held up the bank and escaped with $115,000.

MRS. KNAPP REFUSES TO APPEAR BEFORE LEBOEUF
New York, Oct. 31—Mrs. Florence J. Knapp, former secretary of state, through her counsel, Alexander Ott, today refused to appear before Stanley L. Leboeuf, Moreland, Ala. commissioner, who for the last few weeks has been investigating charges that Mrs. Knapp wanted the state money in the compilation of the 1925 New York state census.

The refusal was contained in a letter sent by Ott to Leboeuf. In it, Mrs. Knapp asked Ott to delegate witnesses to appear before the commissioner in her behalf.

FORECAST OF SPRING TRADE IS FAVORABLE

Employment Is Expected To Remain Steady, Report of Survey Shows

SALES SATISFACTORY

Trend Is Toward Increased Activity, Marion Industrial Leaders Say

Winter will find industrial Marion operating on a normal basis with employment steady and with favorable prospects of increased activity in the spring.

That, briefly, is the report of a comprehensive survey conducted today among local manufacturers and which coincides with the results of similar investigations in industrial communities throughout the country.

While heads of Marion concerns are conservative in their views of future business the general trend of opinion as indicated in interviews today is that winter and spring trade will equal that of average years and that conditions at home will depend largely upon the volume of trade throughout the country.

That present conditions are favorable and the trend is toward increased rather than less activity is the consensus of opinion. This view, industrial leaders say, is engendered by favorable reports from outlying districts.

MARION S. S. CO.
A favorable condition now prevails in the business of the Marion Steam Shovel Co. as the result of a satisfactory trend of sales, which equals the average of the last two years, J. L. Ackerson, president of the company, stated.

He regards the outlook as good and says that if sales continue on the present level there is no likelihood of any reduction in the working force.

There have been some additions to the force of employees recently and the four-day schedule of factory operations established several weeks ago has been increased by employment of a small force of men on Friday and Saturday.

Plan Increase
The shop force now consists of about 950 men, which is considerably below the number employed last year at this time. Improvement in methods of operation, resulting in greater efficiency, enables the company to handle its output with a smaller force, Mr. Ackerson states. This operating corps will be increased as sales call for larger production.

The large surplus stock of machines which was on hand when the new management took charge of the business early this year is being gradually reduced, an especially substantial reduction having been effected in the last two months, the company's president said.

It was the need of moving this surplus stock which was largely responsible for curtailed production and consequent decrease in the working force.

Reorganization of the sales department has been completed and satisfactory results are now being achieved in both domestic and foreign fields, Mr. Ackerson said. The company is planning an extensive campaign for export trade which is expected to bring a substantial increase in business in the course of a few months.

HUBER CO
One of the brightest spots in Marion's industrial situation is found at the plant of the Huber Manufacturing Co., which is running at full capacity with approximately 300 men on the payroll.

E. B. Barlow, president and general manager, said today that this schedule is virtually certain to continue for an indefinite period. The plant is busy turning out chaffy road rollers and is turning out a new model.

ENGLISH LECTURER GIVES SCIENCE TALK

John W. Doorly Addresses
Local Congregation in Marion Star Auditorium

"Christian Science teaches us to think of God as Principle, and uses the word Principle to show that God is the fundamental and invariable source of cause; that He is the same yesterday, today and forever," said John W. Doorly, C. E. B., of London, Eng., in a well-attended lecture on the subject.

Don't Gamble with your EYES!

YOUR eyesight is as precious as life itself. Watch it closely. Don't let it get damaged beyond the point of repair. If you have any symptom of eye trouble or strain such as persistent headaches, d i z z y spells, blurred vision or squinting, have your eyes examined promptly. If you are already wearing glasses be sure a change in lenses isn't necessary.

Dr. R. C. Price
Optometrist
Over Marion Theatre
168 W. Center St.

"Christian Science: The Eternal Science of God and His Christ," Saturday night at the Star Auditorium. Mr. Doorly is a member of the board of trustees of the mother church, First Church of Christ, Scientists, Boston, Mass.

The lecture continues, "The Discoverer and Founder of Christian Science, Mary Baker Eddy, was raised from what seemed likely to be her deathbed through her study of the Scriptures. She had grasped from them some notion of the true nature of God, and had also perceived that Christ Jesus was not using some specially bestowed power when he performed his marvelous and convincing works, but that through his exact and comprehensive knowledge of God he was simply utilizing the ever-present divine law, which might be unknown to those who were ignorant of the Father's true nature, but which was ever available to all who understood God aright. This divine law had formerly been utilized to some extent by Abraham, by Moses, by the prophets, and later by Christ Jesus and his followers, and it is this law that Paul describes as the 'law of the Spirit of life in Christ Jesus,' which he declared had made him 'free from the law of sin and death.'"

Science Teachings
"Christian Science teaches us to think of God as Principle, and uses this word Principle to show that God is the fundamental and invariable source of cause; that He is the same yesterday, today and forever. Christian Science also uses the name Principle for God to show that God's nature, His divine presence and power can be demonstrated. It has sometimes been objected that this word Principle makes God seem distant or cold, but Christian Scientists have found that the knowledge of God as infinite divine Principle, who changeless, is the rock upon which the waves of error dash themselves in vain. Many Christian Scientists under great stress of sin and disease have gratefully recognized the nearness and dearness of God as over-available Principle who cannot fail to heal and to save, and whose divine law is ever operating on behalf of those who will understand and use it.

"Both Christian Science and the Scriptures teach that Christ expresses God's nature, and to be this perfect expression Christ must manifest all true qualities.

"When humanity understands that God is infinite Mind or intelligence, it will naturally perceive that it was his spiritual understanding, or the Mind which was in Christ Jesus, that made him the true likeness of God, and it will then be willing to go a step farther and see that spiritual understanding always manifests the likeness of God, that is, of infinite divine Mind, and is therefore always the Christ to every human condition. Such understanding is, however, as we have seen, really the consciousness of true being. This appearing to human consciousness of true being is the forever coming of Christ, with power to heal the sick, reform the sinner, and comfort the sorrowing. This healing and saving power of Christ is clearly defined by Mrs. Eddy when she states that Christ is 'the divine manifestation of God, which comes to the flesh to destroy incarnate error.'"

Loss Reality
"In the presence of spiritual understanding—that is, the consciousness of true being, or of Christ—sin, disease, death, and discord of every kind lose their reality and disappear, because they are seen as futilities, having no reality, although claiming to be real according to the testimony of the five physical senses. In fact, they lose their reality in the only place where they ever seemed to have any reality, that is, in the carnal mind, in human experience, or in wrong thinking, just as the belief that two and two are five loses its reality before the understanding that two and two are four.

"Mrs. Eddy's many years of suffering and the vicissitudes of her mortal life, combined with her intense longing to know God, all fitted her for this revelation which has done so much to bless mankind and which has already saved a vast multitude from sin, from disease, and even from death.

Not a Substitute
"Mrs. Eddy then wrote her textbook, 'Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures,' giving to the world her discovery in a clear and concise manner and turning all her followers to the daily study of the Scriptures. This textbook is not only in no way a substitute for the Bible, but it is safe to say that no book has ever been written that has caused a deeper or more concentrated study of the Scriptures than has this book.

"Christian Scientists are grateful beyond measure to Jesus the Christ for his unique example and life-work, and their recognition in him the Saviour of mankind because of his knowledge of God and of true being; and their know-that only as they gain spiritual understanding and live above the mortal will they too be attaining the Mind of Christ, and become fellow-heirs with him."

STUDENT COURT TO TRY ALL VIOLATORS

New Department Will Be Inaugurated at State University This Week

Marion Star Bureau
Ohio State University
Columbus, Oct. 31.—A student court, which will hear all cases of traffic and other student violations on the campus, will be inaugurated at Ohio State University this week.

The court will be composed of seven student judges, all of whom have been elected recently by the Student Senate at the University.

Following successful attempts in the past to place responsibility on the students in deciding the welfare of the student body, President George W. Nighmare worked out the plan for the installation of a student court. It will be the first time that such powers have been given the students at Ohio State University.

Nearly 150 traffic violation cases in addition to several other cases, will be brought up for the decision of the court at its first meeting, next Saturday morning. Campus policemen who make the arrests will meet with the court and act in the capacity of prosecutor.

The court has been given all of the powers in traffic cases that President Nighmare has exercised in the past. On several occasions last year, the president prohibited the violators the use of their cars on the campus and suspended a few of the law-transgressors from the university entirely for a period of time.

George B. Marshall, a son of a former mayor of Columbus, has been named chief justice of the court. He is a senior in the university enrolled in the College of Liberal Arts. Other members of the court include Jerry Montgomery and Charles Hideout, Toledo; Charles Reynolds, Columbus; Donald C. Turnbull, Pomeroy; George Snodgrass, Harborton, and Herbert Wise, Lima.

16 Reasons why you need a telephone in your home

There's a thought in the back of your mind that you will put a telephone in your home "one of these days." But, why delay? Below are only six of the hundreds of vital reasons for the necessity of a 'phone in every modern home.

1. For protection. Should the house catch fire, thieves or prowlers intrude, a 'phone is the sentinel that summons aid.
2. In time of illness. A doctor summoned or medicine ordered arrives in a fraction of the time otherwise necessary.
3. As a convenience. When you wish to order household goods you lift the receiver and save hours of time.
4. For friendship's sake. A 'phone keeps you in touch with friends old and new.
5. To save time, worry, uncertainty. When circumstances necessitate that you break an engagement to meet someone.
6. As an identification. Everyone expects to see your name in the telephone directory. Old friends from other towns and local residents too wonder why they don't.

A fire alarm turned in over a telephone often prevents loss of life, saves thousands of dollars.

The doctor called by 'phone arrives sooner when someone is ill.

When bad weather or lack of time make personal shopping impossible a 'phone is a wonderful convenience.

Why Coolidge Had General Speed Home Never Explained

BY CHARLES P. STEWART
Central Press Star Correspondent

WASHINGTON, Oct. 31—Just how big a row there was over what General Summerall said, in that speech of his, out west, is a thing we may never know.

Or maybe we shan't know it until years and years hence, when somebody gets old and garrulous, and leaks. Or perhaps future historians will dig the real yarn out of a lot of ancient archives, in 1927 or thereabouts.

The painful part of it is that the folks who finally got the low-down on it all, if that ever

PRESIDENT COOLIDGE was not under the collar when he read that Summerall had said American soldiers' barracks were worse today than the quarters the Germans kept their prisoners in during the war.

We can set that down as a fact. Otherwise the general wouldn't have been summoned, clear from the Pacific coast, back to Washington, at such a clip that his military aide—an active young man—couldn't keep up with him. Summerall had said anything else worthy of remark, so the natural conclusion is that that was it.

LET'S assume that the general had talked with the president several times concerning the inadequate housing of American troops—and that the president had said yes, he knew, but he had an economy program to think about, too—and that the general had gone away, somewhat disgruntled and made that speech, thereby sticking the president for an extra six millions on his calculations for the next fiscal year.

And suppose the president had admitted: "Well, that's a horse on me, but possibly I can play a little of the same game with Peter Summerall."

And then suppose that Summerall, after being permitted to travel all the way to Los Angeles, under the impression that he was enjoying a nice, restful trip, had suddenly been summoned 3,000 miles back again, still chewing a mouthful of food, to discuss a budget problem that he's already fully discussed before.

Why, the incident would have a kind of Coolidge-esque humor about it, wouldn't it?

THE president is quite given to these little jokes—that aren't exactly jokes.

Secretary of the Navy Wilbur once made a speech—that was out on the Pacific coast, too—that it was rumored the president didn't like. The next thing anybody knew Wilbur was on his way back to Washington—and to say that he was hitting only the high places isn't to exaggerate, for he was journeying by plane.

"Gosh!" cried all the Washington correspondents, coming a-running. "Here's where we see a secretary of the navy censored."

Wilbur arrived on the scene and so did the correspondents.

"Well," inquired the latter, "what's all this about?"

"What, indeed?" said the president. "I'm sure I don't know."

AND that was that.

U. S. Maj. Gen. Charles P. Summerall, chief of staff.

Nevertheless, nobody can tell me, and get away with it, that the president doesn't think these things up in advance.

INTEREST INCREASING IN SCRUB BULL TRIAL

Prospects Good for Large Attendance; Attorneys for Event Selected

Interest in the scrub bull trial which is scheduled for hearing in the art hall at the fairground on Nov. 11 is increasing and prospects for a large attendance are very good, it was reported today by those in charge.

Attorneys who will take part in the battle are Howard Gathers, J. E. Williamson, Carter M. Patton and Alfred Donahue while the trial will be presided over by John H. Clark as judge. The list of attorneys was announced today by Mr. Donahue. There also will be a number of witnesses.

The trial is being staged by Marion County cattlemen and by teachers in vocational departments of the county schools and will have as its purpose the developing of interest in a better grade of cattle. The trial, which is recommended by both national and state agricultural associations as a means of arousing interest in better cattle, will be featured by the presence of a scrub bull which will be charged with being a robber of the farmer's profits.

The trial will be conducted according to court rules, resulting in the bull being found guilty and sentenced to be shot. The affair will also be featured by the formal presentation to the community of the thoroughbred bull won by the county last spring when the largest number of bulls were purchased by Marion County farmers from the bull train operated by the Erie railroad.

FALSE ALARM TURNED IN TO CENTRAL FIRE STATION

Someone wishing to live up a quiet Sunday afternoon, pulled the fire alarm box at Center-st. and Clover-st. at 3:15 o'clock yesterday afternoon. The apparatus from the central station responded to the call, but found neither a fire nor the person who sent in the alarm. The false alarm was the first to be received by the department in the daytime for several years. It is thought by firemen that the box was pulled by someone in an automobile who stopped just long enough to send in the alarm.

Daily Proverb—"Too much adoration is a good ground for suspicion."

Well, we've survived that Ohio State-Chicago result, but there's no denying that it was an awful shock.

We are utterly out of sympathy with this talk about sending Lindbergh to congress. No use wasting high-class material like that.

The Ile de France made the voyage from dock to dock, New York to Havre, in five days and sixteen hours. No record is made these days.

In the light of Saturday's game, it's possible that the O. S. U. alumni may let Coach Wiley hang on for another week or two.

The weekly news reel people seem to be doing their utmost to make a hero out of Earl Carroll, but, believe us, they have some job on their hands.

A fashion expert says that "women have lots of latitude in dressing these days." He probably didn't feel that it was necessary to point out that they have exercised a lot in undressing.

The Kaiser, by direct orders to Zeppelin commanders, forbade the bombing of King George. In his present raid, Mayor Thompson, of Chicago, is not so considerate.

Assistant Secretary of the Navy Theodore Douglas Robinson told a Philadelphia gathering on Navy day that we have too many navy yards, but as yet the manner in which he is to be disciplined has not been stated.

A number of eminent western Republicans—real and so-called alike—are satisfied that they know the ideal candidate for presidential honors in 1928, but up to a late hour this afternoon Senator Curtis, of Kansas, was the only one who had sufficiently mastered his natural diffidence to admit it.

Alien-Smuggling Is Growing.

A week or so ago a matter ago we read that 183 undesirable aliens had been taken to Ellis Island for deportation and that two or three times a month a party of undesirable of about that size was sent out of the country. We mentally multiplied 183 by thirty-six and had for the answer 6,648, which didn't look so bad. In fact, getting rid of over 6,000 undesirable a year we thought, a pretty good showing.

But a day or two ago we came upon a Washington glory carrying the statement that the immigration officials estimated that 170,000 aliens had succeeded in crossing our boundaries illegally in the fiscal year ended June 30, 1927; that the smuggling of aliens into this country had been made a business ever since the first restrictive quota laws were enacted by congress six years ago, and was yearly becoming more and more common, now outranking in magnitude the smuggling in of liquor.

It was stated that the immigration patrol, covering a line 6,000 miles long, had caught 19,000 aliens along the Canadian and Mexican borders and in Florida during the fiscal year, but that these represented but a small proportion of those who had entered illegally, not less than 170,000 having escaped detection.

The figures given do not include aliens who entered surreptitiously as seamen on the thousands of vessels that come to American ports. The laws recognize the right of seamen to transfer from one vessel to another, but there is no way to make sure that the transfers are actually made. There are strong suspicions that few of them are. Many alien seamen desert their ships when they arrive at American ports.

While there is no evidence of the existence of a central ring of alien smugglers like that often referred to in liquor smuggling cases, immigration officials express confidence that there are several "systems" shipping aliens into the United States. The smugglers are recognized as men of great audacity who will shoot at the drop of the hat.

The "underground railroad" is a feature of alien smuggling on the Canadian border, where the crime is more frequent than on the Mexican border.

Thus we have an estimate of approximately 190,000 undesirable coming into our country illegally each year while something like 20,000 are shipped out, which is a decidedly disconcerting showing.

And thus we have also the anomaly of the scum of the outside world—we believe we may use that term since decent aliens would not break our laws to come in—cursing us and calling us oppressors of liberty and free speech and murderers only to break our laws, later on, to enter our boundaries.

We may be in error, but we can not escape the feeling that it would be far more profitable to the country to devote less attention to the intruders of the corn border and more to the turning back of these undesirables who so generally become borers from within against our government and its institutions; more profitable to have fewer insect inspectors and more men in the immigration patrol. We can not believe that any insect carries so great a menace to our land as these human insects invading our land in defiance of our laws.

Malolo on Her Maiden Voyage.

The sailing of the 27,000-ton Matson liner, Malolo, last week, on her maiden voyage from New York City to San Francisco, where she will enter the California-Hawaiian service of the line, was worth more attention than was given it by the newspapers of the Middle West. The Malolo has the distinction of being the largest vessel built in the United States as well as the first to be constructed anywhere under the requirements of the London convention for the safety of lives at sea. She is 582 feet long and eighty-three feet wide, which means that she is the widest vessel afloat in proportion to her length. Under ordinary weather conditions, this fine new seven-decker is able to develop 26,000 horsepower and a speed of twenty-three knots an hour.

The Malolo's initial voyage was to have been made early last summer, but was necessarily delayed as a result of her collision, last spring, while making her speed test off Nantucket, with the Norwegian freighter, Jacob Christensen. The manner in which she came through the collision demonstrated the worth of the new safety devices and measures embodied in her construction.

The facts already brought out are sufficient to justify more than passing notice to her maiden voyage, but there is another fact which should have excited interest even as far away from salt water as we Buckeyes dwell. She is a sort of a mystery ship. All sorts of stories have appeared about her in the papers of the East. Much secrecy marked her building, but she is known to have many features of which the public knows nothing. This mystery naturally added to all sorts of stories regarding her, among them being statements that she is equipped for gun turrets, torpedo tubes and other devices for use in time for war. Just what these features are is not known, but that she possesses many innovations was manifested by the statement of Admiral William S. Benson, who was chief of naval operations during the war, made to the press just before she sailed away with her 450 first-class passengers.

"There are no turrets on this ship," said the admiral, "but I will say that the Malolo has much more in her construction than I care to talk about or than has been revealed."

"We should build more ships of this type and do less verbal fighting over cruisers. Money spent on vessels of this class would not be idle during peace, and the ships would be valuable, because of their construction, as auxiliaries in time of war."

The statement was also made by the admiral that such was the arrangement of the vessel's compartments that she would be comparatively safe against submarine attack.

At a time when it is so manifest that there is a concerted movement on the part of certain elements of our citizenship not only to block the upbuilding of our merchant marine, but also to get rid of that which we already have, it is decidedly encouraging to know that vessels such as the Malolo are being put into operation as an evidence that the possibility of a first-class merchant marine is not all a dream; that we may yet see the time, despite all the obstructions raised against the development of American shipping, when American products will be carried in American bottoms under the flag of the United States.

Poems That Live.

SONG FOR REMEMBERING.

This morning I heard
 A song-drenched brown bird
 Now high, now low at my ledges sing
 A mad, mad song for remembering.
 "Sing," curved the spiraled ecstasy,
 "Your own song of songs that shall make you free!"
 Sing till the last bars of time-space fall
 And eternity in your throat is all,
 The song man heard in another sky
 He must give back or his song's soul will die—
 Sing to the eternals. Always they bend
 To unwind the golden string to the end.
 Sing till each sleeping song-child awakes;
 Sing for the singing's dear sake;
 Sing for the unseen listeners....
 "As unto earthlings men falter and fail
 In the pained search for song's flying grail,
 But as unto these, they reach to the mystery
 Inbreathed in the patient lungs of a tree;
 Inghaired in the hungry arms of the wave,
 Held fast in the blossoming bones of the grave;
 But most widely they harvest, world without end,
 And deep world-deep, in the face of a friend;
 And high, world-high, without hindrance or bar
 In the brother stuff of a comrade's star
 In these temples men find... those who know to sing
 For the ear of the eternals listening."

Watching Progress of Baby.

BY ROYAL S. COPELAND, M. D.

It is necessary to make frequent repetition of the advice about babies, because so many are being born. Each and every baby needs the most careful attention. Without it, the infant can not prosper.

Lots of fine women, good cooks, too, never use a recipe book. They trust to memory for the ingredients and quantities for each dish they prepare.

Of course, this is all right in cooking, because we will survive the wrong mixture. But a pharmacist would never put up a mixture of poisons without consulting the authorities. He must be absolutely sure he is right and he can not afford to take a chance.

Bringing up a new baby without refreshing the memory is not wise. Even if you have had two or three fine children it is a good thing for you to review your knowledge. You will not experiment with your youngster, of course, but be very sure you are not experimenting.

You must take just the same care in the feeding and care of your baby that the pharmacist does in filling a complicated prescription. The safe rule is to follow the rules.

After all, what is the sure test of the favorable progress of your baby? How can you tell that all is well?

The most reliable test, the surest guarantee of the health and physical prosperity of your infant is its increasing weight. The scales tell the story.

I am assuming that your baby is given the chance to kick and stretch and throw its arms all it likes. If the infant does this, his muscles are hard and his body is solid. Increasing weight in a normal child should be increase in bones and muscles, not merely increase in fat.

A healthy baby will have clean, clear skin, bright eyes, firm tissues and active muscles. Then it will gain weight steadily.

During the first few days of life the child may lose weight, but by the end of the first month it is likely to gain nearly two pounds. It will double the weight in five months and triple it in a year.

The sure way to know what is going on is to have a set of reliable scales and make use of them every week. Keep a record of progress, so that you will know just what is being accomplished.

You wouldn't think much of an engineer who pretended to run an engine without a steam gauge. The scales and their use serve the same purpose in bringing up a baby. They tell the story of your success in the infant's management.

Let me go over these weights again, giving them in another way. We want your baby to gain a couple of pounds the first month, but no matter what the weight was at birth, we hope the child will weigh fifteen pounds at the end of the first month and about twenty-one pounds at the end of the year.

A baby usually small at birth is expected to make it up during the course of a few months. Careful feeding is essential to this important result.

Be sure to use the scales and to be governed by them. If there is not satisfactory gain, investigate the reason must be found. If you can't locate it promptly talk with your friend, the doctor.

Notes of Aviation.

A million-dollar aeroplane factory is to be built by the Fokker interests at Wheeling, West Virginia, according to recent report.

Largely due to the development of the aeroplane protective service, the annual loss by forest fires in Northern Ontario has been reduced from $2,000,000 to $50,000.

A flying school for women has been opened near Milan, Italy, by the Aero club of that city. The decision to found this school was taken as a result of Signor Mussolini's earnest desire to increase the popularity of flying in Italy. It is the belief of the promoters of the movement that if they can induce women to learn to fly, the Italian public will begin to take a livelier interest in aviation. Women are to be granted a pilot's license after they have accomplished twenty-five successful test flights.

Editorial Comment.

THE ROMANIAN QUESTION.

Lifting a crown prince out of his heirship is always a rather ticklish job, but keeping a young king out of his inheritance appears to be even more delicate. Prince Charles, of Roumania, did many things that a prince should not do. He was more or less of a sneak, and getting married did not cramp his style. So scandalous were the young man's carryings on that he was relieved of his inheritance, and when King Ferdinand died the baby Michael became king.

Now it is scarcely likely that an overwhelming admiration for the frivolous Charles is responsible for the present agitation for his return. It is, rather, a little bit of political row. With King Michael at six years of age surely able to function as regent, a regency is enjoying royal powers. The opponents of the regency seek to place Charles on the throne and thus do away with the need of a regency. Charles has been sufficiently woozy in his escapades, but he is of mature years and would require no guardianship.

It must be remembered, too, that some kings who were far from model Victorian gentlemen turned out to be canny and efficient rulers. Perhaps the most notable example in recent history was Leopold II of Belgium who was by all accounts a frisky and deplorable old boy long after his whiskers were known white, but who admirably advanced the position of Belgium by his grasp of European statecraft. Charles of Roumania might make good, too; though the chances are against such a consummation.

But whether or not Charles would make a good king is not the vital point. The fate of Roumania will be decided by the comparative strength of two political alliances, one of which shows up Charles and the other for Michael. Personal derelictions, as we may guess, almost nil. On the whole it would be better to leave the boy king undisturbed. But the balance of right or wrong in the whole controversy is so small that it is almost negligible—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

EXPLOITING CHARITY.

Agitation against the alleged coercive methods used in collecting money for the Red Cross from working people began in the Brooklyn navy yard and has spread to other New York establishments. A leader of the navy yard supervisors to stand before the men on pay day and urge them to donate a part of their wages.

If these charges are true it is but a new piece of evidence of a tendency that has been growing in momentum for some time all over the country. Raising money for worthy enterprises is a business these days; such campaigns.

Undoubtedly it is a necessity in this area of organization. Philanthropies must go on and nobody minds being asked for money to help an institution making a real social contribution. But the thing can be, and often is, overdone.

Chicago had the experience with tag days. They grew to be a nuisance until public opinion forced the city government to stop in and limit them. Now, people rather like them. Most people like to give what they can afford and they don't mind being asked for it. But when they are posteried or when they think unfair or embarrassing methods are being used they get mad and put their money back in their pockets.

For the sake of their own welfare and prosperity, institutions which depend on public donations for support should examine their campaign methods and watch them carefully lest they fall out of the public's generous graces.—Chicago Tribune.

The Way of the World.

BY GROVE PATTERSON.

A hopeful pastor in a large city says youth is coming to regard religion as something that can be applied to the whole realm of life, and not to be used in compartments. If young people are reaching this conclusion they are passing beyond the conception of the older generation and they are doing well. The trouble with what grown-ups call religion is that it is made merely a department of life—like grandfather's Saturday night bath. Religion isn't a departmental phase. It is meant to give current to the stream of life.

A Chicago woman, sixty-one years old, was shot twice by her husband because she insisted on using rouge and powder in an effort to make herself beautiful. There is pathos here and the husband was all in the right and the woman was all in the wrong. One of the finest things about the human being is the sense of beauty. It is more deeply developed in women. Every normal woman wants to be beautiful and most of them have the intelligence to try to be beautiful. They have a right to beauty and it is a duty to themselves to try and attain it. Cosmetics and anything else that helps are reasonable means.

For every man who shoots his wife because she tries to be beautiful, there are ten men who forget their wives because they are not beautiful or don't try to be.

Secretary of Labor Davis is right when he says American prosperity rests upon the twin rocks of high wages and great mechanical development. The invention of amazing machinery for high-speed production, plus the high wages which create a buying market, have made us a prosperous public. But there is something more important than all this. What are we going to do now to raise the moral and intellectual standard of the newly prosperous? Machinery and high wages do not of themselves build character.

Perhaps the sharpest criticism of the age is to say that we take too much stock in reason. Things must look reasonable to our finite minds or we are not convinced. Reason is not all. Men and women have other faculties. Hope, faith, imagination, perception, intuition—these are all real and definite qualities. Emotion may be as important, as vital, as essential, as reason. What you feel may be as important as what you can prove. The faculty of reasoning is not all. We have limited minds—or at least so far we are limited in our use of them. There are things that yet defy our reason. But that does not make them untrue.

New York Day by Day.

BY O. O. MINTYRE.

New York, Oct. 31.—Diary of a modern Peppr. Up and came Ben Hampton and his lady and gave me a large old English thorn cane which I prize highly, being the thirty-seventh in a collection costing me for the most part more than I can afford.

So to reading my mail and a merry letter from Chic Sale, the comic, about his night in a tavern in Nevada when he tried to awaken the deaf innkeeper to tell him his tavern was afire. And I tried to read it over the phone to a friend, but so convulsed I could not.

In the evening to Ed Nolan's dinner and Victor Schertzinger, who wrote "Marchesa," my favorite tune, there, also Harry Beaumont, the cinema director, and their beautiful wives and all merry until midnight. And after a drive about the city home to bed.

New York had but one world's fair. This was held in what is now Bryant park in 1856. It was opened by Francis Pickens, then president of the United States, and did not cause much of a stir.

Two major press associations have ordered thumbs-down on trumped-up news stories about movie celebrities. They warn producers faked kidnappings, desert disappearances, toothless lions attacking blades with split curls and such will not be tolerated. Four stories of the past year reached first pages of news stories, cautions. The public sickened of these diodes long ago—now the news-gathering associations have issued a ukase that is spraying wrinkles on the brows of movie press agents who go in for page one splashes.

Silly exploitation stories are not confined to movie players. The legitimate stage during the past few weeks has had its young actresses who wear a glass hat to preserve her hair; a comedian whose dog was outfitted with false teeth; a toe dancer who hires a private manicure artist for her toes, and a leading lady who eats caviar for breakfast. As an exploiter, guilty of many of these half-boos, I have never yet seen one that helped a play along in the profession. As a rule, they create a cheap publicity impression in the minds of the public. Exploitation of a sensational sort seems to be only helpful for street carolers and circuses. The artist does not need them.

On a Madison avenue building is a brass sign reading "Conchologist." I don't know what that is and somehow I do not care to look it up.

The first woman cashier in New York was employed at old Delmonico's restaurant on William street. A newspaper of that day mentioned snootily: "These French with their new-fangled ideas will not last long."

"Dear Old Del's" only lasted ho! ho! about sixty years after that. And it incidentally thoroughly Europeanized most of New York's restaurants.

There is something rather prophetic in a Thirty-Ninth street window sign which says: "This started out a drug store and became a sandwich shop." New York is a city of rushing sandwich eaters. In other days a sandwich was only eaten at picnics. Now they furnish breakfast, luncheon and midnight refreshment to half the city. The East of Sandwich was first to put a piece of meat between two slices of bread. He would not be cheery at a convention of dyspeptics.

Another hurry-up place has a sign-reading: "Pie like mother used to make before she took to cigars."

Little cafes have as much fun with their flippant signs as Ford owners. Says another: "Pie like mother used to make, ten cents—Our pie, twenty cents."

Mayor Walker, on the front seat of the water wagon, is making Broadway wonder if the old street is to become Arid alley after all. That has long been the loud and windy boast of revenue suffers.—Copyright, 1927.

ON THE

Streets of Marion

WITH THE STAR STAFF

A GROUP of old time Marion football players, discussing changes in the game during the last two decades, agreed during a chance meeting recently that while there actually have been some important alterations, the vital points and requirements remain the same.

The fundamentals will never be different, unless the style of play is entirely and completely revamped. This was the consensus of opinion of these former gridiron warriors, who performed here along about the time that Marion was represented by a team which seldom met with defeat. It was known as the Y. M. C. A. team, in spite of the fact that the opposing side was occasionally handled in anything but the Christian spirit.

The discussion came up when some one mentioned the game at Columbus when O. S. U. went down in defeat before Northwestern. According to accounts of the contest, failure of the O. S. U. players to tackle low and to hit the line at the same angle proved to be one of their weak points on both offense and defense.

There is no getting away from the absolute importance of "tackling low" in this game. It has been a vital requirement for football success since the game's earliest days and will continue to be so until the sport passes out of existence, and that is an event which probably will not come until the end of time.

This will be the unanimous opinion of "Billie" Fies, present secretary of the Peoples Building & Loan Association, "Tim" Cunningham, well-known local plumbing contractor, Earl "Rammy" Wilson of the Marion Steam Shovel Co., Dan Evans, local stone quarry operator, Reece Meager of the Bindley Grocery Co., Art Seftner, Huber Company employee, George Knapp, president of the Marion Chamber of Commerce, Harry Mautz of the Thibault-Mautz Hardware Co., and others who starred on local gridirons in years gone by.

WITH New Year's not far in the offing, it is well to look to one's bad habits and begin thinking of means by which one's New Year's resolutions may next year really be kept. According to librarians at City Library, who have ample opportunity of observing human nature in the variety of folk who visit that institution, one of the most annoying, most destructive and most irreparable blight upon human nature is the practice of making "dog-eared" as place marks in borrowed books.

A fresh, clean-smelling, brightly covered book is received at the library, is duly borrowed by the flapper, the school boy, the professor, the club woman or the business man, and, whichever the case may be, is nine times out of ten returned to the library unharmed with the exception of the "dog-eared" or turned-down pages marking the reader's progress through the book.

As a remedy to this unnecessary evil, should resolutions regarding same prove futile, it has been suggested that some business firm, with a view to advertising its wares, issue a number of "markers" of the good old-fashioned variety, decorated perhaps, in the old way, with a red carnation, a bunch of blue forget-me-nots or clove daisies, present them to the library and that they be plentifully distributed throughout the books.

THERE are "tricks to all trades." That is an old one, but nevertheless true, as any one who has tried his hand at something which he knows little of or nothing about will readily testify. Take error hunting, for instance. That is a line of activity which has been yielding substantial profits for a large number of Marion County residents, according to records at the courthouse, where 25 cents is paid for every default error reduced to that state by the use of firearms or some other medium of extermination.

These payments are made under provisions of a state law, which simply requires that heads of the birds be delivered to the clerk of the township where the executions occur.

Several weeks ago two young men from Montgomery Township made a cleanup by saturating corn with strychnine and scattering it in a grove where crows were known to gather in large numbers. The next morning it was found that 117 of the birds had died on the poisoned grain. Their heads netted the hunters $34.75.

That was one of the tricks of the trade. Possibly somewhat ruthless but at any rate it got results.

This week brought reports that another device is being used by these modern "head-hunters." It is a whistle known as the "crow call," which produces a sound which is said to be an exact imitation of the natural note of the bird itself.

Skilful manipulation of this device never fails to get a response by bringing a flock of crows to the place where the hunter is stationed, it is reported.

NEWSPAPER workers in their daily rounds often run across incidents, tragic and otherwise, which can not be classed as news, but still hold interest for readers. This item will serve as an example.

During the concert of the United States Navy Band at the Chauntiqua Pavilion recently, several women who had driven into the plot just east of the pavilion heard a child sobbing. They investigated and found a small girl about three years old lying in the rear of an open automobile, her little lips blue with cold and eyes red from weeping.

They sought to console her, but their ministrations failed to check her sobs.

The tiny tot continued to shiver and weep until a passerby lifted her from the machine and took her to the pavilion. Tears gave way to smiles as the child reached the building where the band was playing. And the misery of being left alone in a field of parked cars in the cold was forgotten when the child spotted mother and father.

Suffice it to say that both parents were confused and embarrassed when the stranger explained that the child had been crying and who was cold.

Now, just as one Pirate fan to another, would you put up with it? That query may put you in the dark and dizzy for a minute, so lower your umbrella and come on the inside and get the lowdown. The Streets of Marion need a rest, anyhow, and a lot of you folks might like to see the wrench that strips the gears in the old item engine.

I'm a head writer on this sheet. Mistakes are my meat. Two others and I sit at a big table called a "desk." The two others own radios. They think they are trying out for the red chair. When a reporter whistles, they try to eliminate him. If I say, "My wife has a new piano number, it is called 'The Roar,'" one of the guys says, "You should hear Federal Smith sing 'He Didn't Do Right By Our Nell' every night at 7:38 from Chataworth, Ill., and the other one pipes up, 'Last night was the first time that we could get Land's End, Tenn.' We heard a Lellie drum solo, 'The Spring Song'." You can readily recognize dear readers, the life I lead. I am only a B battery in a stalin storage.

The city of Marion, this business-hour broadening is beginning to tell on me. Have patience, beloved followers of the public prints, should anything ever appear in the columns like this, "Woman Succumbs To Inside Aerial." You will know then that the strain was too much. Woe be upon poor, humble me, when I write, "Did You Get the Duncan Sisters' Head Demands of Kit-weenians?" On the level, I'll lose my job when the headline on the local retail appears thus: MARION GIRL'S VOICE IS DECLARED WOW—Parked House Greets Static With WHAM.

PERSONS who deplore the modern woman's trend toward cigarette smoking might be convinced that there really is little cause for alarm over the situation if they had happened out on the streets of Marion the other day and witnessed a scene which carried spectators back to the long ago.

Just where the two characters in the old-time spectacle came from and where they were going nobody seemed to know.

Seated in a ramshackle buggy drawn by a nag which seemed willing and ready to pass out of existence at the least provocation were a picturesque couple, a man and a woman, who furnished the finishing details of the picture of the past.

The woman was puffing complacently on a blackened briar pipe and her companion was doing likewise.

Utterly oblivious to the fact that pedestrians stopped to view the spectacle and passing automobiles slowed up so that the occupants might take in the scene, the picturesque travelers disappeared on their way toward the south and left the busy city to continue with its modern habits and customs.

And after it was all over some one who witnessed the spectacle opined that it is evident woman is not just acquiring the tobacco habit but rather is merely improving her taste.

HALLOWE'EN SOCIAL IS HELD AT SCHOOL

225 Persons Attend Affair Given by Kirkpatrick Students

Kirkpatrick, Oct. 31—About 225 persons attended a Halloween social held at the school house on Friday night. Prizes were given Ed Vogel as the funniest answered man and Vivian Lukins the funniest answered girl. The entertainment was furnished by the pupils. SALES DRIVE IS ON IN VERNON HEIGHTS

Realty Company Launches Fall Campaign; R. T. Lewis in Charge

After several days of preliminary organization work, the Vernon Heights Realty Co. today launched a fall sales campaign which is expected to be one of the most important and extensive undertakings of its kind in the history of the city.

A sales force under the direction of R. T. Lewis, president and sales manager of the company, will make a thorough canvass of the city for the purpose of presenting the merits of Vernon Heights property as a high class location for home sites and also as an investment proposition.

He will be assisted in directing the campaign by Karl W. Kessler and C. D. Hill, representatives of the Kessler-Patterson Co., a prominent Columbus firm which has been identified with many of the most important real estate developments in that city during recent years.

In connection with preparations for the sale, practically all streets and drives in the unimproved section of Vernon Heights have been scraped and leveled and detailed plat drawn up to show the location of lots offered for sale.

Final Steps Taken

The final step in connection with the preliminary work was taken today when the Harding Memorial section of the Vernon Heights boulevard was scraped and placed in condition for traffic by seven the Vernon Heights addition and the Marion-Delaware road. This is the main thoroughfare leading west from the addition.

The boulevard was scraped and leveled today by a force of men employed by W. E. McCluskey of Owens, who has had charge of the contract for practically all excavating and hauling at the Harding Memorial.

The sales campaign, which is expected to last for several weeks, has a two-fold purpose, Mr. Lewis stated today. Although intended primarily to attract attention to merits of the Vernon Heights property, the work of the sales organization will also serve to promote Marion's general progress by placing stress upon the sound and growing value of real estate in all sections of the city.

Population Figures

In carrying out this program, attention will be directed to Marion's steady growth in past years and to present conditions which show that the city is on the way toward continued expansion and prosperity.

Figures showing how Marion's population has increased since 1850 to the present time have been compiled.

This table discloses that since 1850, when the population was 257, the number of Marion's inhabitants has increased during each succeeding 10 year period as follows: 570, 1,311, 1,841, 2,531, 3,889, 8,327, 11,836, 18,232, and 27,831. The last total is the census report for 1920 and it is estimated that the census in 1930 will place the city's population at approximately 30,000.

This is the first general sales campaign launched by the Vernon of the first addition five years ago. In the five-year period, all of the original first addition and a large part of the second addition have been sold and 21 fine homes constructed.

The Vernon Heights allotment covers 172 acres, a large part of which has been improved with construction of streets, drainage facilities and landscaping. More than 1,200 trees have been planted throughout the allotment.

The steamship "Carry Conley," recently launched at the American Shipbuilding Company's yards at Lorain, O., is the largest bulk freighter afloat under American registry.

Veritien Amazed

Of course we all accompanied Eleanor Lincoln and young Mr. Jackson to their car. Dicky was the last to spend them on their way, and I am sure that it was not jealousy but accuracy of vision which told me that his farewell was a lingering and flamboyant one. But I was annoyed when I caught Mr. Veritien's eyes watching me, and realized that he shared by observation and my opinion.

He fell into step beside me as we returned to the veranda. Noel pointedly waiting for Dicky, thus leaving Mary to Lillian. I heard my friend laughing and talking rapidly behind me, and guessed that she meant to sabet my employer in his very patent desire for a few words alone with me.

Mr. Veritien walked with me to the far end of the veranda, glanced around to see that we were out of earshot of Lillian and Mary—Noel and Dicky had not yet come in—and said tensely: "What is this about your husband drawing Miss Lincoln? Is he going to paint her portrait?"

I looked at him in astonishment. There was in his voice an imperiousness which I rarely had heard, and in addition a tensely which appeared absurd considering the subject of his query. I did not attempt to keep a finger of recent out of my voice as I answered.

"Oh, no! Dicky is not so fortunate—or so ambitious. He does not do portraits."

He barely waited for me to finish before voicing an excited expostulation. "But what is it then? For what is she going to sit tomorrow?"

I raised my eyebrows a trifle and felt a strong desire to tell him that he would better put his inquiries to Dicky. But the remembrance that he was my employer, and that I had no desire as yet to put my work for him in jeopardy curbed my speech.

"I do not know," I told him, "but I think she has promised to sit for the illustrations for a forthcoming novel which he has been commissioned to illustrate. He does a great deal of that work, you know."

He brushed my assumption away with an impatient wave of his hand, and his eyes were hard and arrogant as he looked down at me.

"But this is monstrous," he said. "Surely Miss Lincoln does not understand that her face is to appear in drawings as if she were a paid model? I caught my breath in anger that dwarfed my astonishment at this odd championing interest in Miss Lincoln's affairs. Gone for the moment was all thought that the man standing before me was my employer. My wounded vanity as well as my pride for Dicky's good breeding were aflame.

"It is not the same thing at all," I flared. "It is considered a great compliment for my husband to ask a girl to pose for an illustration. You cannot imagine how many sniffs for an invitation, and how rarely he finds a type which suits him. And I have posed for him several times and I do not consider it 'monstrous' nor do I feel like a 'paid model.'"

Mr. Veritien gave a sudden choked exclamation, then seized both my hands.

"Oh! believe that I am bowed with remorse," he exclaimed extravagantly. "I did not dream! Don't you know that I would not offend you for the world?"

His eyes were filled with a contrite concern that went far to appear my wounded vanity. But something eerie, compelling, drew my gaze away from him, and I saw Dicky glaring at me from the doorway.

Jubilee's
PardnerA Story of Boyhood
Adventure

BY JUDD M. LEWIS

Yesterday was Sunday, and it was so cold the ground was frozen wherever it stuck up in little lumps, and I didn't want to be let down out of the house where his warm bed was. I didn't want to go down either, but I didn't have got more sense than a dog has. Anyhow I have got more father than Jubilee has, and that is the thing a fellow has to watch out for when he don't get up in the morning.

When I had fed up face and my ant was getting ready to scrub me for Sunday school I asked my grandfather if he had had a ant who washed him for Sunday school, and he said he had. Then I asked my ant if she had just as soon hold me by the hair of the back of my head whilst she washed me, because I didn't want to be baldheaded in front like my grandfather was from using a ant, and everyone but me and my ant laughed; and then my mother said, "Really, Nancy, it does not seem to be necessary to hold him by the hair to wash him," then I said, "I would rather it would be my hair than my ear, for I don't want one lit up like a car and the other one like a palm-leaf fan." Then my mother said it was not necessary to hold onto my ear either. My ant just snorted, but she didn't hang onto my hair or ear when she was washing me, she hung onto my neck, and her fingers are skinny and about a mile long.

When she had a good grip and I heard my mother bringing some dishes from the dining room, I held my breath and stuck my tongue out and rolled up my eyes like Feeble has showed us all how to do, and the next I knowed there was a scream and a smushing of dishes and my ant let go of me and I fell on the floor, and then someone grabbed me and poured some cold water on my face, and I opened my eyes and said, "Where am I?" and everyone was around me and Annabelle Lee was crying.

My father went out and told the bunch I wasn't going to Sunday school, and I stayed home all day and laid in the lounge and made out like I had a sore throat and my mother made me soup and custard because they are easy to swallow. My ant stayed in her room all day.

When me and Jubilee went out to the barn this morning, we found the bunch was out last night and gathered all the cabbage stumps there are and bring them to our barn because it is Hollow-een. Me and Jubilee went to bed early.

HIGH RIDE TO SAFETY
WISH! Wish!

A dark shape flitted from out of the nowhere and hovered over Mother Possum's head.

"Beware!" squeaked a shrill voice, and the dark shape melted into the shadows, only to reappear in a moment, and this time to hang in midair over Peter.

"Beware! Beware!" it cried, again and again, until the boy became more curious than frightened.

"Beware of what?" cried Peter. "Are you speaking to me, sir, or to the Possums, or to all of us? And of what are we to be afraid? How shall we know what to do if we don't know what the trouble is? You are flustered your wings so fast that I can't be sure whether you are a bird or not. Are you?"

"No," squeaked the flying voice. "I am a Bat, and it is evident that you are a creature who walks in the daylight or you would have known it at once. But this is no time to talk about myself. I come as a friend of the Possums and I bear them a warning."

Bat paid no further attention to Peter but headed for the Paw-Paw tree, squeaking as he flew.

"The hunt is on, Mrs. Possum. Two-Leg hunters are abroad and Wood Wolf and his brothers are on your trail. Two-Legs carries a bang-stick. I saw it on his shoulder, glistening in the moonlight. There is not a moment to lose. Get out of the moonlight, Possums. Run for your lives if you would save them. Hark! Wood Wolf has caught your scent. He will lead his master straight here."

"Woowow!"

Afar in the fields that bordered the Great Wood, Wood Wolf was baying the glad news that his nose told him to his master, the hunter. At the sound of the dog's voice things began to happen under the Paw-Paw tree. Mother Possum leaped to the ground and gave several sharp yelps. Then Peter saw a sight he never forgot. Every little Possum hurried to mother's side and jumped upon her back. Mother Possum arched her tail forward and all the little Possums curled up their tails over mother's, until they were hanging from it like so many little plums. Before Peter could so much as say goodbye, Mother Possum trotted, her children riding in safety, high on their queer coach.

Next—"Batty Flies Off in a Huff!"

BEATRICE BURTON, Author of "HER MAN," "HONEY LUCK," "THE HOLLYWOOD GIRL," etc.

CHAPTER XXI

AUNT EMILY'S new kitchen-maid was at the sink, washing lettuce leaves. She turned in surprise as Sally, scarlet-checked and panting, burst open the door and dropped onto the nearest chair.

But a second later, when the door swung open again to admit Aunt Emily, she turned her back upon the kitchen and went on washing the lettuce as if nothing else in the world mattered to her but the cleanliness of that lettuce. She had a wholesome fear of her employer.

"What WERE you doing?" Aunt Emily wanted to know, standing before her pretty niece, with her platter of hot chicken still in her hands. "Tell me this minute!"

"Shaking my shoulders," the girl replied after a minute or so. "Ted was showing me a new dance, and I started to shimmy for him. . . . He hates me."

She looked up suddenly, her eyes dancing with fun and mischief.

"I know how to do it, though, don't I?" she asked with the winsomeness of a child that knows it has done a wicked but funny thing. "I can shake, rattle and roll to beat anything, can't I? It's my only accomplishment, Aunt Emily!"

She shook her lovely shoulders again, and the movement was as delicately lovely as the flutter of a bird's wings as it coasts along the sky.

Aunt Emily stared at her with eyes that seemed to be popping from her head. Could this be her niece, the calm and sensible and dependable Sally?

This bright-eyed, innocent-looking young thing who talked about "shaking, rattling and rolling," as she might have talked about sleeping, breathing and eating; who actually knew that vulgar dance—the "shimmy."

Well, never let me see you doing anything like that again in MY house!" she snapped, starting away again with her platter.

She had no inkling at that time of how soon she would have to eat her words.

Ted was very cheerful and talkative on the way home that night under the autumn moon. He had just sold Aunt Emily a car—or, at least, he had her promise to take one from him—and the deal had got him up wonderfully.

"I've been doing awfully well lately," he said, throwing an arm carelessly along the back of Sally's seat in his swift-running little "Cheapsides."

Sally sat up straight. She knew that there was nothing careless about that arm. She had ridden with Ted so many times that she knew just what his technique was.

First he would put his arm along the back of the seat, as if by accident. Then he would let his fingers just flick her shoulders. Then they would tighten there, and presently he would be trying to draw her close to him so that he could kiss her.

It had happened that way a hundred times, and the outcome had always been the same. Sally simply would not let him make love to her.

"Tonight she began to sing to herself as if he were not in the car at all. "Bend way down and shuffle around, and—"

"I wish you'd stop that fool noise and listen to me," Ted cut in, angrily. "I'm trying to ask you to marry me, Sally. I'm beginning to make a lot of money, and I could—"

"Oh, don't lose your head because Aunt Em bought a car from you just now," Sally interrupted, breezily but sensibly. "One swallow doesn't make a summer, you know, old boy. And besides, this isn't my year for getting married. Something tells me that!"

She laughed. She felt light-hearted and care-free. The music and the brightness she had just left behind her had done that to her, as music and a good time very often did.

"What is your year for getting married?" Ted asked, stolidly.

"Nineteen hundred and ninety-nine, your poor crack-pot," answered Sally. "Didn't you know that?"

Ted groaned. "I don't like you when you're like this Sally," he told her helplessly. "I wish you'd talk sense to me tonight. 'Won't you?'"

She shook her head.

Add then, all at once, she made a queer little strangled noise in her throat. It was rather like the chirping sound that a little bird makes when it is frightened.

"What's wrong?" Ted asked, starterled his dark, handsome head in the direction of his own office.

"You did better work for me, during the time your sister was in the hospital, than anybody ever did for me," he went on. "I didn't know how much I missed you until you stopped."

I got so used to having my letters written perfectly, my desk in order, my pencils sharpened, and a sandwich slipped under my nose whenever I couldn't get out for lunch. I miss talking to you, too."

That was all probably true, Sally reflected, confusedly. . . . Millie was beautiful. But she had very little to say for herself, and she certainly knew nothing about keeping a place tidy.

"But I'm not going to work for John Nye any more," she told herself, severely. "I'm not going to be his office boy—his human typewriter—while Millie's his sweetheart."

And, of course, Millie always would be his sweetheart—until she was his wife. So that was that in nut shell.

Sally shook her head stubbornly. "I—won't work—for you," she managed to say, and to speak was a tremendous effort. She felt as if every word was a leaden weight that she dragged from the very bottom of her heart.

She did not see John Nye again for a month.

Sally, trim and slim in pure white linen, was sitting at one of Aunt Emily's tiny tables, mending a flower hole in the tablecloth she had just laid there.

It was 10 o'clock on New Year's eve, and she had been working for Aunt Emily for four weeks.

It is hard to get a table in most restaurants in this country on New Year's eve. Almost every place that serves food and provides music is packed to the doors on that most festive night of all the year.

But Aunt Emily's "House by the Side of the Road" was barely half full, and neither Aunt Emily nor Sally could figure out any reason for it.

Their food was delicious, and the loud-toned phonograph kept the rooms filled with the latest dance music. The dining room was not so large that it looked bare and dreary, even when there were few people in it. But, somehow, the place had just not "caught on" with the public. And Aunt Emily who had put the savings of a lifetime into it, was heart sick.

When she was heart sick and unhappy, she betrayed it by gruffness and bad temper.

So for a month Sally's life there had not been particularly happy, and her lips were drawn down at the corners as she stitched busily at the cigarette hole in the tablecloth.

"Happy New Year!" a bright voice said, close behind her, and she glanced up to see Millie standing beside the little table.

She had on a large black felt hat and a coat trimmed with black, fluffy fox, and against her slender clothes, her blondness was startlingly lovely. The cold air outside had brought new brilliancy to her eyes and genuine color into her smooth cheeks.

She looked around her at the half-empty room.

"You haven't much of a crowd," she said, in her light fluting voice. "We thought you wouldn't have. You never do. That's why we came out here. We wanted to be to ourselves, you know."

"Who's 'we'?" asked Sally. "You and Mr. Nye?"

This was going to be pleasant, she thought. To watch John Nye and Millie make love to each other all evening long! And particularly on a night like New Year's Eve, when people went more or less wild and did most of the things they wanted to do—in public.

Millie was shaking her head languorously as she did all things.

"No, it's not Johnny tonight," she drawled smiling down at her sister through her thick fringe of blackened eyelashes. "He's gone out to town for the holidays with his people."

It's Davey Davidson tonight, he's parking his car outside. Now, give us a nice table—one that's off by itself."

She half opened her hand bag and showed Sally the top of a silver whisky flask that was in it.

"Jannica rum," she said, with a wink of one scintillating eye.

Creomulsion is guaranteed satisfactory in the treatment of persistent coughs and colds, bronchial asthma, bronchitis and other forms of respiratory diseases, and is excellent for building up the system after colds or flu. Money refunded if any cough or cold is not relieved after taking according to directions. Ask your druggist.—Adv.

"It's my upper arms which bother me. What can you do about them?"

Moulder of Figures
The lady who sits behind the desk is Marjorie Dock. She has come to be known, these last three years, as the moulder of feminine figures. When her anxious clients put their case before her, she answers them in brief:

"Seventeen years ago, out in Lansing, Michigan, I weighed 165. Today I weigh 125. What I did for myself, I can show you how to do for yourselves—if you will put your character into it."

Perhaps Miss Dock answers thus in concrete terms, because all her life has been concrete. And perhaps she goes back for an answer to Lansing, Michigan, when she came home one night and told her mother she wasn't going to be a trained nurse, at all.

"A nurse makes only set wages all the days of her life," she said. "I'm going to open a beauty shop. Every woman wants to be beautiful. I'm going to turn that universal passion to helping us on in life."

"I washed the floors of my shop, with the curtains closed, for fear folks would see and think I couldn't afford a scrubwoman. Our kitchen looked like a Chinese laundry. At night we washed our one day's supply of towels and hung them in. Before dawn I brought them in."

"Beauty Is Figure Deep"
"Soon Lansing got too small. We moved to Detroit, and we prospered. So I came on to New York. And now—"

She motioned towards the gymnasium of her smart establishment where society dowagers and debutantes and one or two celebrated women of the stage were all exercising on mechanical horses and "stabilizers" and bicycles and hip reducers. Then she went on:

"Beauty is more than skin deep. It lies in the graceful lines of your youth. Women want to keep thin for three reasons: to get a husband, to keep a husband and to keep a position. A woman is as old as her hips. We all, as a sex, have agreed on this."

Miss Dock has a word of comfort for the woman who can't run away to a city to have her figure moulded.

"Exercise at home," she says. "Twenty minutes on the exercise mat, night and morning, plus sensible food, and a good conscience, will do as much for the little woman who must manage her husband's dollars carefully, as I can do for the millionaire's wife."

Flaming youth is likely to be prettier much of a cinder before 30.

hairs and friends how much I think of this splendid preparation of yours."

This remarkable statement about the celebrated new Konjola compound was made a few days ago by Mrs. H. L. Martin, well-known Marion lady, living at 604 Pearl Street, this city, while talking with "The Konjola Man" at the Stump and Sams Pharmacy, 121 South Main Street, this city, where crowds of people call throughout each day to find out for themselves about this surprising medical preparation that has recently astounded drug men and general public alike in this entire section.

"For several months our little girl's health had been a constant worry to us," continued Mrs. Martin. "She wouldn't eat, was restless at night and losing weight and dwindling away. She wouldn't play like other children and just seemed to be in a stupor all the time. We gave her nearly everything recommended to us, and were informed by best authorities that it would take a long time to get her back to health again, as she was all run down."

"I decided to have her take Konjola, and while she has taken it only two weeks, I can truthfully say she is the picture of health. I think I must be the happiest woman in the city now. I notice that my daughter's cheeks are getting pink color in them and her eyes actually sparkle with life. She is hungry all the time, and sleeps fine at night."

"Konjola has done more for my child than any medicine we tried. It relieved her of long suffering, and we want you to know how grateful we really are to this splendid medicine. We will always recommend it."

The Konjola Man is at the Stump Pharmacy, 121 South Main Street, Marion, where he is daily meeting the local public and introducing and explaining the merits of this remedy.

FOUR LOSE LIVES IN FALL OF PLANE

Belief Held That Veteran Pilot
Fainted at Controls of Ship

New York, Oct. 31.—Belief that Pilot LeRoy Thompson, 28, of Waterbury, Conn., fainted at the controls of the new Fairchild monoplane which crashed with a death toll of four near New Brunswick, N. J., yesterday, was expressed today by officials of the Colonial Air Transportation, owners of the ship.

The tragedy occurred but a short distance from the spot where a Regatta Airways plane had crashed seven persons to their deaths on Sept. 12.

Thompson, pilot of the biplane which plunged eastward yesterday, was a veteran in the air. He also was manager of the New York branch of the Colonial company. With him in death went his fiancée, Elizabeth McGowan, 25, Newark school teacher.

Investigation was said to have revealed that the motor of the plane was roaring smoothly up to the moment that it was plunged into the earth. Witnesses questioned today said not until the plane was a few yards from the earth, did they realize it was out of control. Structurally and from a motor standpoint, it seemed to be functioning properly.

The other two victims of the crash were Wesley Hubbell, 27, Hackensack, N. J., and George Hanner, 28, Hillside, N. J., both telephone company employees.

TWO LOTS SOLD

Dr. S. W. Mattox and A. J. Millisor
Purchase Home Sites

Sale of two lots in Vernon Heights addition, one to Dr. S. W. Mattox and the other to Arden J. Millisor, local building contractor, was announced today by the Vernon Heights Realty Co. The Mattox lot is located at the corner of Concord-av and Summit-st, and the one purchased by Millisor is on King-av.

Millisor started excavating Saturday for a new dwelling house, the fifth constructed by him in Vernon Heights this year.

These two sales were among the first made in connection with the fall sales campaign of the Vernon Heights Co., being negotiated last week. The campaign was not scheduled to be in full swing until this week, the program last week consisting chiefly of instruction meetings for the sales force.

Golden Tornado Turns to Spring Zephyr Against Driving Storm of Rockne Irish

BUCKEYES FINALLY ALL RUN IN SAME DIRECTION; WIN 13-7

Zupke Unleashes Attack That
Blanks Michigan; Gophers
Beat Badgers

CHICAGO, Oct. 31—While midwest football fans still talked excitedly in strange tongues over Saturday's "surprising upsets," less emotional coaches and players today were outlining the strategy that will lead this week-end to greater glory or to more "surprising upsets."

If a tonic to stimulate enthusiasm over next Saturday's card is needed one has only to consider the Notre Dame-Minnesota encounter which is scheduled for Soldiers' Field, Chicago, neither team has been beaten. They are perhaps the two most powerful dynasties in the midwest.

Grudge Fight
Further, it's a "grudge fight." Rockne's special meat is any Big Ten Conference team. Involutive laughter would be heard the length and breadth of the conference if one of its number should beat Notre Dame. The Irish triumphed the Gophers last year, 19 to 7, but not until several on each side had been laid low.

There is Minnesota with its Joeesting and Almqvist; Notre Dame with its Flanagan and Collins. They all remember last year's game and they will be in there this Saturday. Minnesota is tied with Illinois for the Big Ten lead—Rockne and his Irish have their eyes on a national title.

The elimination of Michigan by Illinois, the victory of Notre Dame over Georgia Tech and the routing of Stagg's confident Chicago Maroons at the hands of Ohio State, were the high spots of Saturday's results in the midwest.

Zupke Does It
The Wolverines had not been scored on until Bob Zupke unleashed his smartly-trained Illinois upon them. Illinois must now be rated as a potential conference winner, although Zupke still has Iowa, Chicago and Ohio State to play, a tough schedule for any team.

Illinois and Minnesota are the only undefeated conference teams to date. Minnesota beat Wisconsin Saturday, 13 to 7. Chicago went the way of Michigan when the dissection-torn Ohio State troupe finally began running in the same direction and put over a 13 to 7 score. Chicago had scored a second touchdown, but the referee ruled a Maroon back had got in motion too soon and the tally was disallowed. It was Chicago's first conference defeat.

Georgia Tech's Golden Tornado, with dreams of national recognition following a victory over Alabama last year, southern champions, blew itself out

OHIO WESLEYAN AND SYRACUSE TO PLAY INTERSECTIONAL GAME

GLANCY (QUARTERBACK)
HALLIDAY (HALFBACK)
WAID (FULLBACK)

Delaware, Oct. 31—Methodist will battle Methodist when the eleven of Ohio Wesleyan and Syracuse, two of the outstanding universities of that division, play at Syracuse, N. Y., Nov. 5.

When the Battling Bishops and Syracuse met first in 1925, Ohio Wesleyan was the first team to score against Syracuse that season, playing them to a 3 to 3 tie to the surprise of both teams and all concerned. Robert Tilton, tackle, pictured above, and Lawrence Meyers, fullback, are the only members of the 1925 Bishop team which played Syracuse who will meet the Orange again this year.

Couch George Gauthier of the Bishops will rely largely this year on against Rockne's Irish will at Notre Dame. The final score was 26 to 7.

"Show Me" Says Missouri
Missouri's rambling eleven, now heading the pack in the Missouri Valley Conference, stopped over in Evanston, long enough to paste Northwestern, 31 to 19. The "show-me" boys flashed one of the prettiest passing attacks seen here this season.

Iowa and Purdue also played non-conference opponents. After Denver had held Iowa for three periods, the Mountaineers' line weakened and Armil cracked through in the final period for a pair of touchdowns. Purdue, with its sometimes-great Ralph "Pete" Welch, got going against Montana and finished on the heavy end of 39 to 7.

Nebraska surprised, not so much by the result as the size of the score, by winning an intersectional tilt with Syracuse, 21 to 0. Many experts had picked the Easterners to win.

Three Big Ten conference games are scheduled for this Saturday: Illinois at Iowa, Michigan at Chicago and Northwestern at Purdue. Ohio State travels to Princeton, Wisconsin plays Grinnell and Michigan State tackles Indiana.

JACK WILCE LOOKS TO PRINCETON GAME AS HOWLS SUBSIDE

Illinois at Stadium Nov. 19
Will Give Bucks Chance
To Retrieve Losses

Columbus, Oct. 31—With criticism which raged in alumni circles through the state, and on the campus at Ohio State University following the defeat by Michigan a week ago, quieted today, by State's brilliant victory over Chicago, Dr. J. H. Wilce, head coach, today planned to begin his preparations for Ohio's next big test, the Princeton game, this week-end.

Although Ohio's conference title hopes are all but gone, with two Big Ten defeats recorded at the hands of Michigan and Northwestern, supporters of the Scarlet and Gray today pointed out that the home-coming game with Illinois here Nov. 19, with the latter team apparently the best bet for a conference champion at this writing, offers Ohio State an opportunity further to retrieve its dimmed prestige.

The revamped backfield—with Krebs and Grimm at the halfback positions and Fouch at quarterback and Lawson at full—clicked brilliantly against Stagg's charges, and the long passing game, State's forte in the good old days, won the game from Chicago.

The program for the week called for intensive offensive drill, much passing practice, and scrimmage to bolster the still apparent weaknesses of the Ohio line.

RACER HURT

Arthur Noll Beats De Palma, Then
Crashes Through Fence

Jersey City, N. J., Oct. 31—Arthur Noll, of Plainfield, N. J., who earned his niche in racing chronicles yesterday with a sensational victory over Ralph De Palma, was reported improving at a hospital here today where he was removed after a crash in the race following the De Palma event.

Noll, after beating De Palma at the Metropolitan Heights fairground, returned to the next race and again was well out in the lead when he took a hub with another machine and smashed into the fence, his car rolling over three times. Noll suffered a broken shoulder and slight internal injuries.

Will Weigh in Today; Expected
To Go Around 160
Pounds

Chicago, Oct. 31—Mickey Walker, middleweight champion of the world, tapered off today for his ten-round encounter with Mike McTigue at the Coliseum tomorrow night.

Walker makes no secret of the fact that he has his eye on the light heavyweight crown, that he expects to defeat McTigue and demand a "shot" at Jimmy Slattery, title holder.

Shoeb Walker, who once held the welterweight crown, succeeded in this ambitious program, he would be the first man in the history of boxing to hold three titles.

McTigue has concluded training and will do just enough work today to keep on edge. They will weigh around 160 pounds. Walker's title will not be at stake.

Cleveland, Oct. 31.—Northern Ohio's week-end traffic toll reached eight when an Erie passenger train struck an automobile at Burbank, south of Lodi, late yesterday, killing four members of one family.

The dead: Mrs. Willard Workman, 35, of Burbank; Willard Workman, 13, a son; Hazel Workman, 8, a daughter; and Willard Workman, Jr., 2, a son. Willard Workman, the father, and another daughter, Gypsy, 8, are in a hospital at Lodi.

DOCTOR BADLY PARALYZED
Physicians in Several Large Cities Pronounced Case Hopeless

SYKODNER AGAIN PROVES EFFECTIVE

"I had a bad nervous breakdown, caused by financial losses, which left me badly paralyzed," says Dr. F. Morrison. "This occurred two years ago. I immediately visited some of the best physicians and surgeons, in several large American cities. I finally went to the San Diego County hospital. All pronounced my case hopeless. This was two years ago. About four weeks ago, however, I fortunately was offered a free trial treatment with the Sykodner, of which I had heard so much. I took advantage of it. I am very glad, indeed, that I did not for after the very first treatment I was convinced that I, at last, had found something that would help me. I now sleep soundly, something I could not do before; and I feel that continued use of the Sykodner will do the work."

DOG CURED—NO FAITH CURE HERE

The Sykodner System is something entirely new and different from all else. It is based on the discovery of one of the world's most eminent biologists of Europe. Its amazing success is due to the fact that it removes the cause for disease—eliminates the blood—removes the toxins that produce most chronic ailments. It uses neither drugs, serum or surgery. It surely is worth investigating. It costs nothing to do this.

A dog of Mr. Wm. Sisk, suffered severely with twitching, or chorea, following an attack of distemper. He was cured by letting him sleep within the influence of this great medical triumph.

TREATMENT FREE
Regardless what your ailment may be, call at our office; or, phone 4116 for an opportunity to take a twenty-minute delightful treatment, in the comfort of your own home. This without cost or obligation. Its magic results, and mystifying phenomena will amaze you beyond your wildest dreams. It is causing a tremendous response, from near and far. For health is the greatest of all wealth. You cannot afford to miss it. Grasp the opportunity NOW—while you may—before it is entirely too late. Scores of Marion citizens did so. Why not you?

JIMBLE THEATER

BY SEGAR

Customer: LISTEN, BOSS, I BOUGHT THIS JOINT AND I'M THE BOSS AND I CAN RESPECT FROM MY EMPLOYEE. WHEN YOU INSURE ME BE BRIEF AND TO THE POINT-DO NOT RESORT TO CIRCUMLOCUTION!!

Now I'm asking- how many customers do we have in a day?

Well, as to that, I can't say. I can only say we hold the record.

Big sale on "off-on switches" half off.

Yeah, if nobody comes in today, it'll be a no-sale month.

Fine! Now that's fine! A record, eh?

KRAZY KAT

I'm never gonna be proud to say that one time one of us gets looked at a king fency that now.

Pro Poo Poo - what of us? We're mice, huh? What of us? We're mice.

And you, officer pup, what have you to be proud about?

Think of all the elephants we've scared. Well, we've scared them, you know.

BRINGING UP FATHER

Here I am on my way back to America without Dinty. He must still be in Africa. I happened to hear him say that.

By Golly, seems to me I know those feet.

Jiggs: Dinty!

This is luck you know you won on your board. I wanted to get home, you know, and you lost.

TILLIE THE TOILER

IS SHE LONELY? NOT A CHANCE

This idea of Tillie and me not speaking is getting on my nerves. I'll go in and make up with her. Maybe she's lonely and sad like me.

Oh, hello, Dick. You want to know what I'm doing? I'm going to the shop with Fred tonight.

Tomorrow night? Oh, I'm going to a dance tomorrow night with Jimmy. I have every night this winter taken up.

And also next week, Dick. But maybe this week after that we can get together if you ring me up first.

THE GUMPS

ONE BILLION DOLLARS

BY SIDNEY SMITH

Do you ever stop to think?

My father Adam started to work the day he entered the garden of Eden. He was paid $500 a day and was on the job every day - rain or shine. He would now have a nest egg amounting to $40,816,478.02. To make a pile high - laid on edge in a straight line they would reach from Denver, Colorado to the main street of Buffalo, N.Y. -

POLLY AND HER PALS

A PERFECT DISGUISE

BY CLIFF STERRETT

The good ship "Porpoise" with her millionaire owner, Mr. Maudsloe, a prisoner on board, was anchored off shore to take on water.

Little knowing that the Perkins family are marooned on the island, Captain Stern and the arch fiend Sharp follow Neewah, disguised as a native, into the jungle where he half-drowns them in the springs, and steals their clothes.

Do you realize that if that gang of cut-throats sees through your disguise, they'll murder you in cold blood?

Without your guises and with your moustache rearranged, you're the very spit of the terrible Captain Stern.

Remember to keep your collar up, Ash!

Come, Gent! It lacks but an hour till dark. An' we've much to do!

JUST KIDS

BY AD CARTER

Remember to look up before you cross the street!

It's gettin' kinda cold - winter here!

Well, where does the summer dance band go in the winter? Off to Alaska!

Go south for the winter!

I'm the scouter of the bugle. An' I'm sent up to see the youth who's on hunger strike - if you want my mind.

How are you, Jerry? Well, I'm sayin' somethin'.

I ain't got nothing to say, and when I ain't got nothing to say, I don't say it.
